SNOW, ICE ELIMINATE INVASION THREAT

By Sir Philip Gibbs
LONDON, Jan. 9.—With snow threatening further falls over the landscape of Europe it is likely there will be a lull in the tempo of events on the continent.

The weather already has stopped Der Fuehrer's German bombers for two nights and is likely to check any German adventure westward for invasion or southeastward in search of oil.

Modern mechanized armies are brought to a standstill by snow and ice. Tanks cannot grip the ground when ice-bound and trucks skid off the roads and lurch into wayside ditches. There is no visibility for planes when snow flakes cover windows and cockpits.

During last year's glacial winter when I was in Flanders horses were able to move more freely than machines. So if this kind of weather holds it is doubtful whether Hitler will order his troops to move in any campaign in southeast Europe, which is his alternative to an invasion of Britain.

What is he up to down there in the southeast? His staff officers and agents have been very busy in Romania lately, partly because of the oil wells, and partly because the geographic position makes it a good stepping-off ground for an attack on Turkey.

Other adventures will follow for the sake of oil, which he needs more than any golden treasure. The Persian oil fields are very tempting no doubt.

Is there any way through to Persia and Mesopotamia? That sounds fantastic, but the brains of Adolf Hitler and Herr Von Ribbentrop have fantastic dreams.

Turkey stands in the way of any movement in that direction and Turkey will fight beyond doubt if Germany opens hostilities against her frontiers via Bulgaria.

The Bulgarians themselves are tough fighting men. Once

I saw an old war when they were fighting the Turks, now their friends.

The Turks can put 400,000 men in the field and with Bulgaria they could put up a strong resistance even against German mechanized columns.

They have a long way to come. German tanks would have rough roads and the journey would drink up precious oil at every stage.

Nevertheless, if they could get that far and if Hitler withdrew many air squadrons from the west for a lightning attack on Turkey, they would need all their courage and all their strength to hold their line against such weight for the Germans still have something like 250 fighting divisions, from which they could spare something like 50 while holding down the invaded countries in the west.

A lot depends on the attitude of Russia. The dreams of Hitler and Ribbentrop—those terrible dreamers of hideous nightmares—are dependent on the plans and ideas of the silent man in the Kremlin in Moscow who is Stalin.

Stalin doesn't open his mouth. Foreign Secretary Molotov doesn't often indulge in oratory. One can catch a glimpse only now and then what is the reality of the Russian policy by inspired articles in the Russian press or activities of their agents abroad.

Some political circles in England, mainly left, have the idea Russia is friendly to the democracies and that Stalin is a true democrat who is temporarily a

Wilhelmshaven And Emden Hit During Night Attacks

British Announce Barracks Ruined At Borkum

ROME, Jan. 9.—Enemy bombing attacks on the ports of Naples and Palermo were announced by the Italian high command today.

The attacks on Naples and Palermo, in Sicily, were carried out by planes which came over in "successive waves," the war bulletin said, adding:

"Numerous bombs were dropped on Naples, but most of them fell into the sea. In the harbor one hospital ship and in the city 15 buildings including one church were hit. Five persons were killed and about 30 injured.

"In Palermo no damage of any importance was caused and there were no victims."

LONDON, Jan. 9.—Braving bad weather which kept Nazi raiders on the ground, RAF bombers last night attacked Germany's naval shipyards at Emden and Wilhelmshaven, it was announced officially today.

The Air Ministry stated that terrific explosions and huge fires flared at Wilhelmshaven as a result of the daring assault and that more than 20 fires broke out in Emden's docks as a result of a heavy aerial pasting there.

Airdrome Barracks Hit

Other British bombers attacked a German airdrome at Borkum Islands, where a barracks was hit by bombs and fires were caused.

All the attacking British planes returned safely to their bases. Two Air Ministry communiqués told of the new attacks against the Nazi bases.

The first said merely that "the RAF successfully attacked naval bases in northwestern Germany last night."

But the second announcement, issued as full reports from the returning airmen were received, gave more complete details. It stated:

"Last night RAF bombers attacked naval shipyards at Wilhelmshaven and Emden.

"At Wilhelmshaven many explosions were observed. These were followed by large fires. More than 20 fires were started at the docks at Emden.

"Other aircraft bombed an enemy airdrome at Borkum, where a barracks was hit and fires broke out. No British aircraft is missing."

It was understood the British pilots encountered terrific weather on their flights to Emden, Wilhelmshaven and Borkum, but on arriving over their important naval and military targets found much clearer visibility.

This, it was stated, ensured that the British bombs fell on the target areas.

NEW COLD WAVE TO STRIKE OHIO

Frigid Weather To Come From Northwest Late Thursday

By International News Service
Ohio's brief respite from bitterly cold temperatures was to come to a shivery close today as a new cold wave was scheduled to move in from the Northwest.

Temperatures throughout the state this morning were just above the freezing mark, except along the Ohio River, where they ranged seven or eight degrees higher. However, forecasters warned that a new cold wave was moving into the state, and that several days' cold weather was in store.

Light rain, later turning to snow, was to accompany the drop in temperature. Tomorrow was to be generally fair but continued cold.

Road conditions throughout the state were reported as generally fair by the state highway department, but were expected to become increasingly hazardous as more snow fell and the mercury dropped. The northern part of the state already was blanketed with snow in depth from one-quarter of an inch to 2½ inches in the Cleveland area.

ADVANCES ON ALL FRONTS REPORTED

ATHENS, Jan. 9.—Greek advances on virtually all Albanian fronts were reported today, with fighting especially severe on the far northern sector where a counter-attacking Fascist detachment was "decimated" by the artillery fire.

The Italians were moved down as they made a costly but futile attempt to storm a Greek defense post beyond Pogradec on the snow-covered frigid northern battle front.

(Editor's Note: Reports received in Budapest via Belgrade told of heavy fighting on the Tepeleni-Klisura sector in Central Albania, where the Italians were claimed to have occupied a few Greek positions.

STIMSON ORDERS STRONG FORCES INTO CARIBBEAN

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Moving to strengthen this country's Western Hemisphere defenses, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson today announced formation of a unified army Caribbean defense command.

The new command will include the present Puerto Rico department, the Panama Canal department, and the new base command recently set up on Trinidad, one of the Caribbean bases obtained from Great Britain.

It was the second major defense move by America's fighting forces within the last 24 hours. The Navy yesterday announced a sweeping reorganization which included orders to man every vessel afloat at full war strength and to elevate the Atlantic patrol force into the status of a full fleet.

Stimson stoutly refused at his press conference to disclose the number of men going to outlying bases. Asked about this, he declared bluntly:

"What is the use of telling Mr. Hitler how many men we will have on these bases—he may have ways of finding out, but I won't be one of them."

The new Caribbean defenses will be under command of Lt. Gen. Daniel Van Voorhis, the present commanding officer of the Panama Canal department, Stimson said.

to a major battle for possession of that strategic stronghold—possibly in the near future, depending on the progress the Greeks can make through the deep snow drifts.

When the Italians tried to storm the Greek position beyond Pogradec, the Greek artillery batteries and machine gun nests opened up with a death-dealing fire that ripped holes in the ranks of the Italians.

Reports from the front said the Fascists were "decimated" and forced to leave 20 of their dead on the field of battle.

In the Klisura region on the central front, other dispatches said, the Greeks took a number of Fascist prisoners.

Meanwhile, Italian planes bombed the Greek port of Salonika, narrowly missing a conspicuously marked Red Cross hospital filled with patients, many of them Italian prisoners wounded and then rescued by the Greeks and sent back from the front for treatment.

HORSE'S ROLE IN ARMY NOT SO IMPORTANT, BUT UNCLE SAM WANTS BEST

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—The cavalry may not have the role in modern warfare that it had in other years, but Uncle Sam still wants the best in horses.

Plans Of Graziani Being Watched Carefully By Attackers

With The British Army Before Tobruk, Jan. 9—Italy's forces in the arid Libyan desert appeared virtually paralyzed today as the swiftly striking British imperial forces led by Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell closed in relentlessly around the Fascist stronghold of Tobruk.

British airmen, returning from far-flung reconnaissance flights, reported they were unable to detect any sign of Italian troop movements anywhere in the Tobruk region.

As the British investment of Tobruk continued, some observers expressed belief that the Italians might let this stronghold go to the British with slight opposition, and that Italian Marshal Rodolfo Graziani might elect to make his final, desperate stand at Benghazi.

Hour by hour the British troops closed in and pressed around and beyond Tobruk, which was virtually surrounded by Wavell's forces as early as yesterday.

Today this cordon of men and mechanized weapons grew so tight, authorities said, that Tobruk is virtually cut off from all avenues of rescue.

British authorities said it would be practically impossible for the Italians to obtain reinforcements from the West, since swift British mechanized units—speedy tanks and armored cars—control the area directly west of the beleaguered Libyan port and fortress.

CHICAGO FACING MAJOR CRISIS AS STRIKE STARTS

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—Chicago's municipal household was paralyzed today by a strike of 2,000 AFL union members against the city's proposed ten percent wage cut.

The 13 unions that went out on strike left skeleton crews to man essential services, such as police and fire alarms, but the strike brought these immediate effects to the nation's second largest city:

No traffic lights were operated in the city, leaving skeins of tangled traffic in all sections. The garbage collectors refused to service the city's four millions.

City officials, politicians and office workers jammed into city hall lobby and literally were funneled into the two elevators that the unions had to operate because of fire regulations. The other 12 elevators were idle.

It was cold in city hall, too, and there were no lights. The fires were banked at 8 a. m. when the strike started, and dwindled to almost nothing in short order. The temperature in Chicago was 31 degrees above zero at 10 a. m. Members of the Electricians' Union took care of the lights by pulling a master switch.

SHERIFF ORDERS PINBALL GAMES OUT OF COUNTY

Protests By Parents Of School Children Cited By Radcliff

CONFISCATION IS MADE Official Cites Decision Of Supreme Court On Machines

Recent protests to the sheriff's department by parents maintaining their children are spending their school lunch money on pinball machines and other devices brought announcement from Sheriff Charles Radcliff Thursday that such machines must be cleaned from the county.

The sheriff said already he had confiscated a pinball machine and a penny cigarette slot machine, and that unless such machines were taken from establishments by owners the machines would have to be confiscated.

No charge has yet been filed against the store manager where the machines were found Wednesday, the sheriff said.

According to a recent Supreme Court decision any machine which entices one to play where chance is involved is considered a gambling device, the sheriff said.

British Continue African Drive

THIS map shows how the British war machine is continuing its drive westward over the sands of Italian Libya. Though the British are now hammering at the gates of Tobruk it is believed an encircling movement is taking place and that other British forces are advancing toward distant Benghazi, 140 miles west of Tobruk. Meanwhile, British bombers are raiding Tobruk and Tripoli. Derna, a northerly port, is also a British goal.

Fish Bag Limit To Be Altered For Next Year

COLUMBUS, Jan. 9.—Except for a reduction in the daily bag limit of game fish, the state fishing regulations for this year will be substantially the same as they were in 1940, the Conservation Commission had decided tentatively today.

The commission postponed formal adoption of the new regulations until its February meeting.

The new bag limit will be 25 game fish a day, with not more than 50 in possession. Last year the limits were 40 and 80 fish, respectively.

The commission decided to rescind an order of last year closing to fishing the waters immediately below specified dams during the spawning season. The dams were anancy watershed district, the Englewood Dam on the Stillwater River, The Highland Park Dam of the Miami River, and the Steel Dam on Mad River.

The minimum mesh of minnow seines and dip nets used in Lake Erie was reduced from 1/4 to 1/8 inch. It was also decided to open Guilford Lake, in Columbiana County, to fishing on June 15, instead of July 1, as in 1940.

The commission also indicated that it would expand its stream safety zone program, adding to the 57 miles of streams that were closed in 54 counties last year.

Five Farms Closed

Five of the state's 12 fish propagation farms were ordered closed, while facilities of the other seven were to be expanded. The small units to be abandoned are at Millersport, London, Bucyrus, Piqua and Defiance.

Personnel of the closed farms will be used on stream improvement projects and erosion control, it was stated. The move to close the five small farms resulted from complaints that the conservation division was placing fish in some waters which were unfit to receive them.

Other business transacted by the commission included:

A $22,000 appropriation to buy land for a 200-acre headwater lake in Brown County;

A $10,000 appropriation to buy rabbits to supplement the Ohio trapping and replanting program;

A $5,000 appropriation to buy food-bearing trees and shrubs for wild-life support and erosion control, and

A decision to continue cooperation with Ohio State University in the operation of the laboratory at Put-In-Bay.

Conservation Commissioner Don Waters also announced the appointment of C. F. Blakeman as acting chief of the enforcement division. Blakeman succeeds James Ulmer, who resigned to resume his position as sergeant with the state highway patrol.

Radcliff Named To Major Post

Pickaway County Solon Chairman Of Group Considering Finances For Institutions

William D. Radcliff, Pickaway County's representative in the General Assembly, was appointed Wednesday to an important chairmanship in the legislature, the G. O. P. official being named to head the educational section of the Finance Committee.

This committee, which is a part of the general Finance Committee, one of the most important in the Assembly, considers appropriations for the various state-supported educational institutions.

The Williamsport man is also a member of the judiciary committee.

He was appointed also by house officials as a member of the special committee which will investigate two election contests for seats in the Assembly. The committee has had its first meeting and has instructed contesting candidates to file briefs stating their claims by next Tuesday at 2 p. m.

'Economy' Keynote of State's Legislators

COLUMBUS, Jan. 9.—The House Finance committee went to work today on the partial appropriation bill already passed by the Senate as the 94th General Assembly concluded its first week's work.

Several clashes marked preliminary sessions as Democrats and Republicans sparred over patronage and committee assignments, but in practically every instance GOP members emerged victorious because they held majorities in both houses.

The senate made short work of the temporary budget, which called for a total of $76,617,000 to operate the state during the first six months of the year. House leaders predicted the measure would be passed finally next Monday or Tuesday in time to assure payment of January 15 salaries.

Actions of Republican leaders in early sessions indicated that the GOP dominated legislature and state administration again would concentrate on "economy" in government.

The Senate finance committee, under the chairmanship of Sen. Fred L. Adams, (R-Bowling Green), slashed a total of $1,149,000 from the original budget estimates.

Pension Office Slashed

Largest single item cut was $500,000 from the amount originally allotted to the Old Age Pension Department. The reduction was ordered after Old Age Pension Director Tom McCaw admitted to the committee he could operate his department without the additional amount.

"When they boost pensions beyond the point of good business they are tearing down the pension system," Adams commented.

The administration's economy keynote was sounded in the House by Majority Floor Leader Harold W. Houston (R-Champaign), when he argued in favor of a legislative rule banning publication of "unnecessary" bills.

In the past, all of the hundreds of bills submitted were published and distributed to legislators, although only a comparatively few ever reached the floor for a vote. Under the rule, the reference committee now may decide whether a bill is important enough to be printed.

Except for the passage of the Budget bill, little action is expected in the assembly until after Governor Bricker delivers his message next Wednesday. Bricker and elected state officials are to be inaugurated Monday at ceremonies in the rotunda of the state capitol at noon.

Estimates Studied

Meanwhile, State Finance Director Herbert Defenbacher is busy conferring with department heads about estimated funds needed for operation during the present biennium.

It was understood that Bricker wants the general appropriation bill ready for submission to the Assembly by February 15 to insure a short session. Defenbacher, however, said his office was "swamped" with work and expressed doubt he could prepare it by that time.

Municipal officials were cheered by introduction in the Senate of a bill appropriating $2,206,000 as the state's share of funds spent for relief last year. The measure was introduced as an emergency bill by Sen. Grant P. Ward (R-Columbus).

Investigation of two election contests of its members faces the House when it resumes sessions next week. Contestants are J. Willard Farnworth and Louis N. Lademan in Lucas and Orin L. Graves and Gladys E. Davis in Scioto.

Contestants have been ordered to submit statements on their claims not later than 2 p. m. next Tuesday. The probe will be conducted by a committee comprised of four Republicans and three Democrats. Houston is chairman of the group, while Minority Floor Leader H. L. Mason, Wyandot, is secretary.

Skirmishes during early sessions indicate Republicans should have no trouble pushing through regular legislation during the session. However, the GOP majorities in the two Houses are not great enough to push through emergency bills if Democrats decide to oppose them.

House membership at present is divided 78 to 59 in favor of Republicans, and in the Senate there are 17 Democrats and 19 GOP members.

Both nominally are Republicans.

ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS REWARD

This column offers three prizes of fifty, thirty and twenty dollars for the best answers to the following question:

"In the long run, are dictatorships more efficient than republics? Limit your answer to two hundred words. Mail it within one week after this column appears to Samuel B. Pettengill, Shoreham Building, Washington, D. C.

This contest is open to the rank and file American, to all except lawyers, teachers, professors, economists and professional writers. The names of the winners will appear in the first column published in February, together with excerpts from the winning answers. At that time I shall submit another question with like prizes. And so on for several months, perhaps throughout the year.

There is no catch whatever in this. It is on the up and up. There will be no trick questions.

This is my own idea. No one suggested it. But, of course, there is a reason. In fact, two reasons.

First, for my own information I want to know how well certain basic facts are understood. Facts which lie at the very foundation of our system of government and social and economic structure. I want to know how well or how poorly our public schools have contributed to that understanding. I want to know what high school boys and girls, workers, farmers, and housewives are thinking.

Second, it is my hope that this column will encourage newspapers, luncheon clubs, veterans' and patriotic organizations all over this country to stimulate similar searches for truth and common understanding of our common problems. I am certain it is needed.

I will tell how I came to do this. Three months ago I was talking with a friend of mine. He said, "Every office building, railroad, factory, farm, store, and home in America is held in the hollow of the hand of the 'mass man'. He can crush the whole system like an egg shell. Or he can guard it against the world."

"We spend millions to advertise the things this system produces—automobiles, radios, ginger ale, motion pictures, butter and bread. We spend more millions to insure our factories and farms against fire, windstorm, embezzlement, credit losses, etc. But what are we doing to advertise the system itself? And what insurance are we taking out on the foundations upon which the whole structure rests, — the understanding of the millions who have the power and the votes to insure or destroy?"

"We endow colleges and pay taxes to support the public schools. But what are the colleges and schools teaching? And how many go to college, or finish high school?"

"But this system of free government and free enterprise is in peril. It has vanished in Russia, Germany, Italy. It is going up in flames elsewhere. And sparks are flying across the Atlantic.

"Business men and investors, of course, want to save it. But there are hundreds of labor leaders who also want to save it, men who think as did old Sam Compers. They are struggling against men in their own ranks who think they want to scrap the works. What help are they getting?"

"We get all heated up once in four years when a political campaign is on. Democrats and Republicans alike, we blow in millions in six weeks' time to 'educate the voter'. Most of these millions are wasted. And then we sit on our hands for another four years and do nothing but groan."

"In 1787 some men decided to try to sell constitutional government to our forefathers. They wrote the Federalist Papers. And for two years these men and their friends argued the question in every city and hamlet and hearthside in the thirteen original states. Not to win a political campaign. Not to elect anybody to the pay roll. Just to bring a strong free government to birth."

"That's all. But it was the most successful advertising campaign this world knew until Karl Marx and Hitler and Stalin started another to attack their work and destroy it."

"But that was 153 years ago. It's like advertising Ivory Soap."

OHIOAN TO FACE MURDER CHARGE; CRIME ADMITTED

HAMILTON, Jan. 9.—A grand jury indictment charging first degree murder was sought today by Prosecutor Paul Baden against James E. Keller, 24-year-old machinist's helper, who assertedly confessed bludgeoning his inventor-employer to death to escape possible prosecution on a forgery charge.

The employer, James A. Connelly, 79, internationally famous in machinists' circles, discovered the forgery of a $14.60 check, Baden said Keller told him. When Connelly threatened to cause his employee's arrest Keller struck him twice with an iron bar.

Connelly's body was found near the door of his small machine shop, and Keller was arrested three hours later. He confessed after several hours grilling, Baden said.

The elderly man once was presented a sword by Japan for assistance he rendered that nation. A friend of former Postmaster General James Farley and many other notables, Connelly was the inventor of a very successful frictionless gear box and a brake shoe widely adopted by railroads.

PLANES BRAVE BAD WEATHER FOR ASSAULTS

almost nightly from June to November last year, but since then—until last night—enjoyed comparative immunity from attack.

During November entire stocks of bombs straddled Borkum, causing colossal fires that almost devastated the entire base, British authorities claimed at that time.

But the Germans were thought to have carried out repairs, and this was the reason for last night's "return visit."

While these attacks were in progress, not a single Nazi raider appeared over Britain. It was the third successive night that the Nazis have failed to carry out bombing assaults on the British Isles. Absence of German planes was attributed to the bad weather, which failed nevertheless to check RAF operations.

Priests Save Church

At the same time, it was revealed that steel-helmeted priests acting as fire wardens saved Westminster Cathedral, Great Britain's chief Roman Catholic Church, from the effects of incendiary bombs during a recent raid.

Twenty-eight incendiaries struck the cathedral and the neighboring residence of Cardinal Hinsley. But the priests spotted the bombs at once and they were extinguished before any serious damage was done.

BERLIN, Jan. 9—A single German bomber yesterday pierced through the balloon barrage and anti-aircraft defenses surrounding an important motor plant near Coventry and scored two direct hits which largely destroyed the factory, it was announced in Berlin today.

The plane returned safely to its base, the statement added.

ANOTHER FUTILE ATTEMPT MADE TO BAN WHIP POST

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 9—The Maryland legislature today found itself with another bill to abolish the whipping post as a penalty for wife-beating, but nobody gives it much chance to pass.

Marylanders have long cherished the statute which holds that he who beats his wife shall also be beaten. All efforts in the past to repeal it have failed by wide margins.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

CONSIDER THE POSITION

WHENEVER you contemplate a business double of the opponents' contract, it is well always to consider what use he can make of the information you thus convey to him about your cards. Every day we see otherwise able performers toss away points by disregard of this common sense rule. Not that the extra points are so important. Of far more moment is the fact that the double enables the declarer to read your holding and play you for certain missing cards, thus enabling him to make a contract which you could have beaten by merely remaining silent.

dictator. There is no evidence for this.

On the contrary, Russia's propaganda is stuffed with denunciations of Great Britain and the United States as evil capitalist countries fighting or aiding the war for corrupt and anti-democratic purposes.

The Germans play this up on their side and use language which is very much in tune to the ideals of Communism. None of this can be taken at face value, but it is an indication that Hitler, who once was the arch-enemy of Communism, is ready to play in the same backyard with the Russians if they play the same game with him.

Have Russia and Germany entered a compact over southeastern Europe with an open gateway broad enough for both of them near the Far East? I cannot answer that question by any yes or no.

As yet there is no answer possible, but this enigma which confronts the world may be decided, as I think it will, in the direction in which Hitler next fights. But British victories in Egypt must be causing doubts and hesitations in Berlin and Moscow.

Italy is a broken spoke in the wheel of the axis. The Mediterranean is the Bright highway again. The Suez Canal is the nearest way to the East and the British soldiers have a knack of turning up in unexpected places. Hitler will have to do some hard thinking before he touches the button for another advance.

Once Ill-Fated Thetis Comes to Life; Sinks Sub

Thetis, recommissioned as H. M. submarine Thunderbolt

Sailors work to rescue crew of Thetis, June, 1939

THE "ghost" submarine, the once ill-fated Thetis, that sank during a trial run in June, 1939, carrying 99 men to their deaths, has come into the news again—this time as H. M. submarine Thunderbolt, credited with torpedoing and sinking an Italian submarine within view of three armed trawlers escorting the enemy sub-to place the United States in the role of leader of world democracies.

Conferences will be held today between Speaker Rayburn and Majority Leader McCormack of the house and Democratic Senate Leader Barkley, and Sen. Harrison (D) Miss., president pro tempore of the senate.

Unlimited authorization of money is provided in the tentative draft, it was learned. Sen. Barkley predicted initial appropriations of $2,000,000,000 to $5,000,000,000 to finance the plan, with more likely to follow.

Congressional leaders say they are considering changes in the bill, but Rayburn emphatically denied any odds with the administration. The measure will probably be an entirely new bill, instead of amendments to existing legislation. One group still urges that a separate corporation be created, with Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones supervising expenditure of the funds.

A hot fight for jurisdiction of the proposal is waged by chairmen of at least four committees. It is indicated that the ways and means or the foreign relations or finance committee will pilot it in the senate.

Enactment by January 20 appears doomed to failure because of bitter opposition in the senate. While house leaders insist they can speedily put the measure through the lower chamber, the non-intervention bloc, headed by Sen. Wheeler (D) Mont., is prepared to demand "lengthy debate" on the bill.

Members of this group plan to raise the question of Great Britain's default of World War debts, to demand that England state post-war as well as war aims, and seek amendments definitely committing the U. S. to peace.

AGREEMENT IS REACHED; PATROLMAN BEGINS JOB

Patrolman Carl Radcliff resumed his position on the Circleville police force Thursday at 6 p. m. after a final legal agreement between his attorneys and those of Safety Director Karl Hermann had been reached.

The "appeasement" between Radcliff and the safety director came one day before Radcliff's case was to be heard before the Civil Service Commission. Radcliff agreed to take half of his thirty-day suspension period without pay, and agreed to make arrangements with his creditors to settle his accounts.

FALL OF TOBRUK MATTER OF DAYS

captured by the British, but yesterday it was revealed that he and some of his staff officers had slipped away—before Bardia finally surrendered.

There was a chance that Berganzoli "scrammed" aboard a motor boat, and British naval units were believed to be scouring nearby waters for him and his aides.

There was some aerial activity yesterday in which Italian planes attempted without success to harass British naval units off the Libyan Coast.

Lone Airman Vallant

(Editor's Note: An official announcement issued in London said that a sergeant pilot in a British Hurricane fighter dived on a formation of five Italian S-79 planes which were engaged in a bombing attack on a British naval vessel. Four of the Italian planes were destroyed by the lone British airman, the communique stated.)

Belief that Graziani may abandon Tobruk to siege and eventual capture and stake everything on defense of Benghazi increased in view of the almost air-tight encirclement of Tobruk.

Already British air, naval and military bases have been moved closer to Tobruk to be within easier striking distance of this and other Fascist objectives.

Size of the Italian garrison at Tobruk is believed to be about the same as that at Bardia—more than 20,000 men. According to latest reports, they are unable to flee or receive reinforcements as a result of the British encirclement tactics.

Road Patrolled

Australian troops are in control of the road leading westward from Tobruk toward Derna and Benghazi, and British headquarters considered it would be impossible for any Italian rescue expedition to break through this fighting ANZAC cordon to aid the men trapped at Tobruk.

British reinforcements are constantly pouring up to the British lines before and around Tobruk and patrols are punching with increasing vigor at the Italian defenses.

At the same time British offensives against Italian East Africa grew in importance, and Italian forces in Ethiopia, Eritrea and Somaliland were reported undergoing mounting difficulties in obtaining supplies.

BRITISH TO SHIP 200 U. S. PLANES INTO FAR EAST

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9 — Preparing for "any eventuality" the Far East, the British government is shipping nearly 200 powerful American-built fighting airplanes to Singapore, diplomatic sources revealed today.

Diversion of this number of planes to the huge military and naval base in the strategic straits settlements is described by British embassy attaches as a "routine replacement" of fighting aircraft in that area.

Diplomatic observers, however, view these shipments as another move to further bulwark the defenses along the British line of empire through the rich Dutch East Indies to Australia.

The airplanes being shipped to Singapore with approval of the American government are late model Brewster pursuits, armored with four machine guns and capable of a top speed of 350 miles per hour.

They are one of the better type of American fighter planes, of all metal construction and have 232 pound bomb capacity.

Although embassy attaches insist there is no particular significance in these particular shipments, it is conceded that the British government has been quietly strengthening its air and naval forces at Singapore to a material degree in recent months.

almost nightly from June to November last year, but since then—until last night—enjoyed comparative immunity from attack.

During November entire stocks of bombs straddled Borkum, causing colossal fires that almost devastated the entire base, British authorities claimed at that time.

But the Germans were thought to have carried out repairs, and this was the reason for last night's "return visit."

While these attacks were in progress, not a single Nazi raider appeared over Britain. It was the third successive night that the Nazis have failed to carry out bombing assaults on the British Isles. Absence of German planes was attributed to the bad weather, which failed nevertheless to check RAF operations.

Priests Save Church

At the same time, it was revealed that steel-helmeted priests acting as fire wardens saved Westminster Cathedral, Great Britain's chief Roman Catholic Church, from the effects of incendiary bombs during a recent raid.

Twenty-eight incendiaries struck the cathedral and the neighboring residence of Cardinal Hinsley. But the priests spotted the bombs at once and they were extinguished before any serious damage was done.

BERLIN, Jan. 9—A single German bomber yesterday pierced through the balloon barrage and anti-aircraft defenses surrounding an important motor plant near Coventry and scored two direct hits which largely destroyed the factory, it was announced in Berlin today.

The plane returned safely to its base, the statement added.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

CONSIDER THE POSITION

WHENEVER you contemplate a business double of the opponents' contract, it is well always to consider what use he can make of the information you thus convey to him about your cards. Every day we see otherwise able performers toss away points by disregard of this common sense rule. Not that the extra points from a doubled contract are so important. Of far more moment is the fact that the double enables the declarer to read your holding and play you for certain missing cards, thus enabling him to make a contract which you could have beaten by merely remaining silent.

heart Q and the dummy went down, he also decided to count on East for four trumps headed by the J. That meant the end of any chance East might have had of beating the contract. Without his double, South might have played for a division of the trumps.

South won the opening trick with the heart A in dummy, finessed the diamond Q, took in the A, then led the diamond 4, ruffed by the spade 5 and over-ruffed by the 8. East made South trump the heart K, then the diamond 5 was ruffed by the spade K. The spade 10 was finessed, and the trump A and Q settled East's holding. The diamond 9 was now set up as a good trick, and three high clubs completed the job.

As it turned out, East's headless double cost him a side plenty of points.

dictator. There is no evidence for this.

On the contrary, Russia's propaganda is stuffed with denunciations of Great Britain and the United States as evil capitalist countries fighting or aiding the war for corrupt and anti-democratic purposes.

The Germans play this up on their side and use language which is very much in tune to the ideals of Communism. None of this can be taken at face value, but it is an indication that Hitler, who once was the arch-enemy of Communism, is ready to play in the same backyard with the Russians if they play the same game with him.

Have Russia and Germany entered a compact over southeastern Europe with an open gateway broad enough for both of them near the Far East? I cannot answer that question by any yes or no.

As yet there is no answer possible but this enigma which confronts the world may be decided, as I think it will, in the direction in which Hitler next fights. But British victories in Egypt must be causing doubts and hesitations in Berlin and Moscow.

Italy is a broken spoke in the wheel of the axis. The Mediterranean is the Bright highway again. The Suez Canal is the nearest way to the East and the British soldiers have a knack of turning up in unexpected places. Hitler will have to do some hard thinking before he touches the button for another advance.

to place the United States in the role of leader of world democracies.

Conferences will be held today between Speaker Rayburn and Majority Leader McCormack of the house and Democratic Senate Leader Barkley, and Sen. Harrison (D) Miss. president pro tempore of the senate.

Unlimited authorization of money is provided in the tentative draft, it was learned. Sen. Barkley predicted initial appropriations of $2,000,000,000 to $5,000,000,000 to finance the plan, with more likely to follow.

Congressional leaders say they are considering changes in the bill, but Rayburn emphatically denied any odds with the administration. The measure will probably be an entirely new bill, instead of amendments to existing legislation. One group still urges that a separate corporation be created, with Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones supervising expenditure of the funds.

A hot fight for jurisdiction of the proposal is waged by chairmen of at least four committees. It is indicated that the ways and means or the foreign relations or finance committee will pilot it in the senate.

Enactment by January 20 appears doomed to failure because of bitter opposition in the senate. While house leaders insist they can speedily put the measure through the lower chamber, the non-intervention bloc, headed by Sen. Wheeler (D) Mont., is prepared to demand "lengthy debate" on the bill.

Members of this group plan to raise the question of Great Britain's default of World War debts, to demand that England state post-war as well as war aims, and seek amendments definitely committing the U. S. to peace.

AGREEMENT IS REACHED;
PATROLMAN BEGINS JOB

Patrolman Carl Radcliff resumed his position on the Circleville police force Thursday at 6 p. m. after a final legal agreement between his attorneys and those of Safety Director Karl Herrmann had been reached.

The "appeasement" between Radcliff and the safety director came one day before Radcliff's case was to be heard before the Civil Service Commission. Radcliff agreed to take half of his thirty-day suspension period without pay, and agreed to make arrangements with his creditors to settle his accounts.

MANY NUTS GATHERED

MATTER OF DAYS

captured by the British, but yesterday it was revealed that he and some of his staff officers had slipped away—possibly before Bardia finally surrendered.

There was a chance that Berganzoli "scrammed" aboard a motor boat, and British naval units were believed to be scouring nearby waters for him and his aides.

There was some aerial activity yesterday in which Italian planes attempted without success to harass British naval units off the Libyan Coast.

Lone Airman Valiant

(Editor's Note: An official announcement issued in London said that a sergeant pilot in a British Hurricane fighter dived on a formation of five Italian S-79 planes which were engaged in a bombing attack on a British naval vessel. Four of the Italian planes were destroyed by the lone British airman, the communiqué stated.)

Belief that Graziani may abandon Tobruk to siege and eventual capture and stake everything on defense of Benghazi increased in view of the almost air-tight encirclement of Tobruk.

Already British air, naval and military bases have been moved closer to Tobruk to be within easier striking distance of this and other Fascist objectives.

Size of the Italian garrison at Tobruk is believed to be about the same as that at Bardia—more than 20,000 men. According to latest reports, they are unable to flee or receive reinforcements as a result of the British encirclement tactics.

In addition, food and water supplies at Tobruk are believed to be slimmer even than those at Bardia, which held out under siege only three weeks.

Road Patrolled

Australian troops are in control of the road leading westward from Tobruk toward Derna and Benghazi, and British headquarters considered it would be impossible for any Italian rescue expedition to break through this fighting ANZAC cordon to aid the men trapped at Tobruk.

British reinforcements are constantly pouring up to the British lines before and around Tobruk and patrols are punching with increasing vigor at the Italian defenses.

At the same time British offensives against Italian East Africa grew in importance, and Italian forces in Ethiopia, Eritrea and Somaliland were reported undergoing mounting difficulties in obtaining supplies.

ESTATE LETTERS ISSUED

Next of kin include the daughter, Mrs. Fischer, and two sons, James S. Metzger, Santa Anna, California, and Samuel B. Metzger, Jr., Williamsport.

STRATEGISTS OF REICH DIVIDED OVER INVASION

One Group Reported Afraid Of U. S. Assistance To British Empire

OPINIONS DIFFERING

Hitler Listens To Both Sides, Then Makes Up Own Mind

By Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—As nearly as official U. S. observers in Europe can gauge the situation, there is a split inside the German High Command over immediate Nazi strategy. The split is similar to that existing in Berlin last winter over deciding whether to strike at France, or into the Balkans.

Hitler listened carefully to both sides, then made the decision himself. Doubtless that is what he will do today. The two schools of thought inside the German High Command are:

1. Those who believe the war of attrition against England should continue with air raids and submarine sinkings. They believe the United States will not be able to arm adequately until fall, and that Britain can be weakened and reduced to surrender before then. This group does not want to risk loss of a large number of men in an outright attack across the Channel.

2. The second group urges invasion immediately. Their chief argument is that the United States soon will be helping Great Britain to an extent which may become dangerous, and they think Germany should act now so as to avoid any risks.

Immediate Invasion? Apparently Hitler has not yet made up his mind which school of strategy he favors, though he seems to be leaning toward immediate action.

Signs of this are the large concentrations of troops along the Atlantic Coast from Norway to northwest France. In Brittany and Normandy, all owners of homes have been ordered to evacuate a strip of land about thirty miles back from the coast. Communications between this 30-mile coastal area and the rest of France have been completely suspended.

Simultaneous attacks upon the British Isles and the Balkans are not out of the question, though dependent upon the weather. Heavy weather in the Balkans will make any major advance extremely hazardous; foggy weather in the English Channel should make a Nazi invasion of England easier than at almost any other times.

Fog sometimes is so thick over the Channel that it is absolutely impossible for airplanes to spot ships below, and this is exactly the covering a Nazi expeditionary force needs to edge up to the shores of England. It will be recalled that last September the ability of the R. A. F. to spot Nazi invasion ships broke up the attempt at that time.

NOTE—Obviously the renewed efforts of the United States to arm and President Roosevelt's public urging must be a factor in Hitler's final decision between the two schools in the German High Command.

Variation In Farm Profit Traced To Many Things

COLUMBUS, Jan. 9.—Many things influence the annual labor income earned by Ohio farm families, but two basic factors having great influence appear to be the size of the farm and the yields per acre and per head of livestock or poultry.

The department of rural economics, Ohio State University, summarizes each year the farm records of more than 1,000 farms, and these records provide some pertinent information on reasons for profits or losses in farming. These summaries are sent to each of the farm bookkeepers so he can compare his own income and expenditures with those on similar farms.

Out of a group of 123 general livestock farms in north central Ohio, the average family labor income on 35 farms averaging 206 acres in size for 1938 and 1939 was $1,866.

In the same group, 35 farms averaging 160 acres in size produced a labor income of $24 each of the two years.

The larger farms had 38 acres more per farm planted to crops and the amount of livestock kept was decidedly larger. Each man on the larger farm devoted 257 days to care of crops and livestock while the smaller farms provided only 203 days of work for each man.

Crop yields on the 35 farms which averaged 206 acres in size exceeded those on the 160-acre farms by 1.9 tons of silage per acre, 8 bushels of corn, 1.5 bushels of wheat, and 1 ton of hay. The larger farms had 50 tons of hay each year as compared with 39 tons for the smaller group, and a greater proportion of the hay was clover, alfalfa, or legume mixture on the larger farms.

Difference Noted Considerable differences appeared in the production secured from livestock and poultry on the larger, more profitable farms. Dairy products per cow on the 206-acre group averaged $62.34 for each of the two years but were $47.43 on the 160-acre farms. Egg sales per hen were $2.31 for the first group and $1.34 for the second. Lambs per ewe and pigs per sow were higher on the larger farms.

The larger farms used $1,852 worth of feed each year of which $328 worth was purchased. The amount of feed used on the 160-acre group averaged $1,311 each year with $161 worth of it purchased. The return for each $1 worth of feed was $1.69 on the 206-acre farms and was $1.11 on the 160-acre group.

Members of the rural economics department say that outstanding managerial ability can overcome handicaps imposed by size of farm but the same ability would yield greater dividends on a larger enterprise. It also is true in times of low prices for farm products when profits are impossible that the smaller farm will lose less money than the larger one.

Officers of the Jackson board include Mrs. Dorothy M. Hulse, president; George A. Fischer, vice-president; Mrs. Marvina M. Rhodes, clerk; and Ned H. Bell, James Butt and Herbert Thomas, members.

Virgil Hill remained president of the Scioto Township board, with G. B. Gullick, vice-president, C. V. Neal, clerk and Mrs. Marie Crawford, Miss Mabel Thompson and William Beavers, members.

JURORS IGNORE CHILD'S DEATH IN THEIR PROBE

—URBANA, Jan. 9.—Only a one year workhouse term today confronted George Applegate, 45, who police said confessed that he smothered his unmarried daughter's five-month-old son because "I was tired of feeding it."

The Champaign County grand jury ignored a first degree murder charge placed against Applegate by Urbana police and refused to indict him. Applegate then pleaded guilty to a charge of contributing to the delinquency of his 16-year-old daughter before Juvenile Judge Frank Bower, and was sentenced to the term in the Columbus workhouse.

In his asserted confession, Applegate said he covered the baby's head with bed-clothing as it lay asleep on the floor of their one-room house. He later repudiated his confession, and the daughter, Dorothy, claimed that she believed she smothered the baby accidentally.

Dorothy is to face juvenile court charges later.

Washington Merry-Go Round

many weeks of public hearings, which cost thousands of dollars to the taxpayers.

The study contains many sensational disclosures regarding the business practice and inner financial operations of insurance moguls, and they have been moving heaven and earth to suppress it. So far they have succeeded.

Since the insurance report was submitted, the committee has published a score of reports on various industries, all without delay or interference. The insurance expose is the only one which has been stalled. What makes this so mysterious is the fact that, with one exception, all fifteen members of the committee have approved the publication of the report.

One man alone has been holding it up—the chairman of the committee, Senator Joseph O'Mahoney, Wyoming Democrat.

Why he is sitting on the lid is anyone's guess. During the campaign last year he said he was too busy running for re-election and hadn't time to read the report. But a number of other committee members, who did read and okay the document, also ran for re-election.

After election, O'Mahoney told newsmen he was taking the report with him to read during a long sea cruise. But he has been back from his trip several weeks—and there still is no sign when he will uncock the report.

Questioned the other day, O'Mahoney irritably denied he was trying to suppress the report, contended it is longer than others and therefore requires more time, and finally declared he couldn't see "why people are pounding our backs about this particular report."

"We may print all of it, or cut some of it," O'Mahoney continued. "It's very touchy stuff. It's up to the committee to decide what to do. I haven't any doubt that something will be printed by April 3" (the deadline for the final report of the committee).

Whether "touchy stuff" or otherwise, all the other reports published by the committee carry a foreword explaining that the findings presented are entirely those of the investigators and authors.

NOTE—Representative Wright Patman, Texas anti-chain store crusader, soon will introduce a bill to create a government agency, similar to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, to regulate the insurance business and

UNDER THE DOME

Thanks to the careful advance planning by Floor Leader Alben Barkley and Senate Secretary Edwin Halsey, the convening of the Senate was the smoothest in the memory of veteran employees.

There wasn't a single hitch . . . Tennessee's new Representative Percy Priest, of Nashville, who performed the extraordinary feat of ousting an incumbent Southern Democrat who had won the party nomination, was the most photographed rookie on Capitol Hill. "And the least photogenic," quipped the new congressman . . . Most active gladiator at the opening was bulky, 68-year-old Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts, who, easily re-elected, sat in his aisle seat hand-pumping everyone in sight . . . Most conspicuous absentee was Senator "Cotton Ed" Smith, home in South Carolina fishing and pheasant-hunting.

JACK DEMPSEY'S JOB

Secretary Harold Ickes isn't advertising it yet, but he has been looking around very quietly for a new Under Secretary of the Interior. Reason: Alvin J. Wirtz has been a big disappointment.

Drafted from Texas as a great New Dealer and close friend of Maury Maverick and Lyndon Johnson, Wirtz just hasn't produced. He isn't even around. For approximately two months now he has been trying a private law case in Texas, and hasn't even lifted a blotter on his desk in Washington.

Wirtz went to Texas to try his law case about a month before the November elections, and is not back yet. Officials of the Interior Department have no definite word when he will be back.

Faced with this vacuum, Secretary Ickes has been talking on the q. t. with dynamic Jack Dempsey, ex-congressman from New Mexico and now a member of the Maritime Commission, about the possibility of joining his staff. Dempsey and Ickes are old friends—in fact, such good friends that other congressmen complained dolorously that Dempsey could get all kinds of reclamation and PWA projects for New Mexico, while their own much more populous states were stunted.

So Dempsey will remain with the Maritime Commission until there is an opening in the Interior Department, after which he will probably join Ickes.

COST OF RELIEF IN OHIO LOWEST IN THREE YEARS

COLUMBUS, Jan. 9.—The cost of relief in Ohio in 1940 was the lowest in three years, State Welfare Director Charles L. Sherwood reported today.

Basing his statement on reports from 104 of the state's 152 local relief areas, Sherwood placed the cost of the 1940 program at $24,358,497, as against $25,015,655 in 1939 and $25,656,786 in 1938.

The decrease reached record proportions in November, when the cost shrank to $1,771,574, lowest for any month since the start of 1939. In February costs reached a peak of $2,511,824, caused by a shutdown in WPA projects.

Sherwood credited increased industrial activity, stimulated by the national defense program, for taking thousands off Ohio's relief rolls.

STRATEGISTS OF REICH DIVIDED OVER INVASION

One Group Reported Afraid Of U. S. Assistance To British Empire

OPINIONS DIFFERING

Hitler Listens To Both Sides, Then Makes Up Own Mind

By Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—As nearly as official U. S. observers in Europe can gauge the situation, there is a split inside the German High Command over immediate Nazi strategy. The split is similar to that existing in Berlin last winter over deciding whether to strike at France, or into the Balkans.

Hitler listened carefully to both sides, then made the decision himself. Doubtless that is what he will do today. The two schools of thought inside the German High Command are:

1. Those who believe the war of attrition against England should continue with air raids and submarine sinkings. They believe the United States will not be able to arm adequately until fall, and that Britain can be weakened and reduced to surrender before then. This group does not want to risk loss of a large number of men in an outright attack across the Channel.

2. The second group urges invasion immediately. Their chief argument is that the United States soon will be helping Great Britain to an extent which may become dangerous, and they think Germany should act now so as to avoid any risks.

Immediate Invasion?
Apparently Hitler has not yet made up his mind which school of strategy he favors, though he seems to be leaning toward immediate action.

Signs of this are the large concentrations of troops along the Atlantic Coast from Norway to northwest France. In Brittany and Normandy, all owners of homes have been ordered to evacuate a strip of land about thirty miles back from the coast. Communications between this 30-mile coastal area and the rest of France have been completely suspended.

Simultaneous attacks upon the British Isles and the Balkans are not out of the question, though dependent upon the weather. Heavy weather in the Balkans will make any major advance extremely hazardous; foggy weather in the English Channel should make a Nazi invasion of England easier than at almost any other times.

Fog sometimes is so thick over the Channel that it is absolutely impossible for airplanes to spot ships below, and this is exactly the covering a Nazi expeditionary force needs to edge up to the shores of England. It will be recalled that last September the ability of the R. A. F. to spot Nazi invasion ships broke up the attempt at that time.

NOTE—Obviously the renewed efforts of the United States to arm and President Roosevelt's public urging must be a factor in Hitler's final decision between the two schools in the German High Command.

Variation In Farm Profit Traced To Many Things

COLUMBUS, Jan. 9.—Many things influence the annual labor income earned by Ohio farm families, but two basic factors having great influence appear to be the size of the farm and the yields per acre and per head of livestock or poultry.

The department of rural economics, Ohio State University, summarizes each year the farm records of more than 1,000 farms, and these records provide some pertinent information on reasons for profits or losses in farming. These summaries are sent to each of the farm bookkeepers so he can compare his own income and expenditures with those on similar farms.

Out of a group of 123 general livestock farms in north central Ohio, the average family labor income on 35 farms averaging 206 acres in size for 1938 and for 1939 was $1,866.

JURORS IGNORE CHILD'S DEATH IN THEIR PROBE

—URBANA, Jan. 9.—Only a one year workhouse term today confronted George Applegate, 45, who police said confessed that he smothered his unmarried daughter's five-month-old son because "I was tired of feeding it."

The Champaign County grand jury ignored a first degree murder charge placed against Applegate by Urbana police and refused to indict him. Applegate then pleaded guilty to a charge of contributing to the delinquency of his 16-year-old daughter before Juvenile Judge Frank Bower, and was sentenced to the term in the Columbus workhouse.

In his asserted confession, Applegate said he covered the baby's head with bed-clothing as it lay asleep on the floor of their one-room house. He later repudiated his confession, and the daughter, Dorothy, claimed that she believed she smothered the baby accidentally.

Dorothy is to face juvenile court charges later.

TOBACCO FARM PICTURE, STORY BOOK AVAILABLE

"Tobacco Land, U. S. A."—probably the most complete picture-story of tobacco farming and cigarette manufacture ever published—is offered free to the public by Liggett & Myers Tobacco Company in its new Chesterfield cigarette campaign.

The new 42-page, 14-inch book illustrates the growing, curing, and processing of tobacco, as well as scenes from the typical life of the Southern tobacco country, with over 100 large photographs and drawings and interesting story captions. It is already in use by colleges and libraries in many parts of the country, and the public offer has been made as a result of this great demand.

Copies of the book will be sent to individuals or groups on request to Liggett & Myers Tobacco Company, 630 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

The new Chesterfield campaign, to appear in newspapers from coast to coast, features such celebrities as Ann Sheridan and Ellen Drew of motion picture fame, Carol Bruce of the New York musical hit "Louisiana Purchase," and Mary Jane Yee and Jo Ann Dean, star skaters from "It Happens On Ice."

Washington Merry-Go Round

many weeks of public hearings, which cost thousands of dollars to the taxpayers.

The study contains many sensational disclosures regarding the business practice and inner financial operations of insurance moguls, and they have been moving heaven and earth to suppress it. So far they have succeeded.

Since the insurance report was submitted, the committee has published a score of reports on various industries, all without delay or interference. The insurance expose is the only one which has been stalled. What makes this so mysterious is the fact that, with one exception, all fifteen members of the committee have approved the publication of the report.

One man alone has been holding it up—the chairman of the committee, Senator Joseph O'Mahoney, Wyoming Democrat.

Why he is sitting on the lid is anyone's guess. During the campaign last year he said he was too busy running for re-election and hadn't time to read the report. But a number of other committee members, who did read and okay the document, also ran for re-election.

After election, O'Mahoney told newsmen he was taking the report with him to read during a long sea cruise. But he has been asleep on his trip several weeks—and there still is no sign when he will uncock the report.

Questioned the other day, O'Mahoney irritably denied he was trying to suppress the report, contended it is longer than others and therefore requires more time, and finally declared he couldn't see "why people are pounding our backs about this particular report."

"We may print all of it, or cut some of it," O'Mahoney continued. "It's very touchy stuff. It's up to the committee to decide what to do. I haven't any doubt that something will be printed by April 3" (the deadline for the final report of the committee).

Whether "touchy stuff" or otherwise, all the other reports published by the committee carry a foreword explaining that the findings presented are entirely those of the investigators and authors.

NOTE—Representative Wright Patman, Texas anti-chain store crusader, soon will introduce a bill to create a government agency, similar to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, to regulate the insurance business and guarantee all policies up to $5,000 without cost to the policyholders.

UNDER THE DOME

Thanks to the careful advance planning by Floor Leader Alben Barkley and Senate Secretary Edwin Halsey, the convening of the Senate was the smoothest in the memory of veteran employees. There wasn't a single hitch.

Tennessee's new Representative Percy Priest, of Nashville, who performed the extraordinary feat of ousting an incumbent Southern Democrat who had won the party nomination, was the most photographed rookie on Capitol Hill. "And the least photogenic," quipped the new congressman.

Most active glad-hander at the opening was bulky, 68-year-old Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts, who, easily re-elected, sat in his aisle seat hand-pumping everyone in sight. . . . Most conspicuous absentee was Senator "Cotton Ed" Smith, home in South Carolina fishing and pheasant-hunting.

JACK DEMPSEY'S JOB

Secretary Harold Ickes isn't advertising it yet, but he has been looking around very quietly for a new Under Secretary of the Interior. Reason: Alvin J. Wirtz has been a big disappointment.

Drafted from Texas as a great New Dealer and close friend of Maury Maverick and Lyndon Johnson, Wirtz just hasn't produced. He isn't even around. For approximately two months now he has been trying a private law case in Texas, and hasn't even lifted a blotter on his desk in Washington.

Wirtz went to Texas to try his law case about a month before the November elections, and is not back yet. Officials of the Interior Department have no definite word when he will be back.

Faced with this vacuum, Secretary Ickes has been talking on the q. t. with dynamic Jack Dempsey, ex-congressman from New Mexico and now a member of the Maritime Commission, about the possibility of joining his staff. Dempsey and Ickes are old friends—in fact, such good friends that other congressmen complained dolorously that Dempsey could get all kinds of reclamation and PWA projects for New Mexico, while their own much more populous states were stunted.

So Dempsey will remain with the Maritime Commission until there is an opening in the Interior Department, after which he will probably join Ickes.

COST OF RELIEF IN OHIO LOWEST IN THREE YEARS

COLUMBUS, Jan. 9.—The cost of relief in Ohio in 1940 was the lowest in three years, State Welfare Director Charles L. Sherwood reported today.

Basing his statement on reports from 104 of the state's 152 local relief areas, Sherwood placed the cost of the 1940 program at $24,358,497, as against $25,015,655 in 1939 and $25,656,786 in 1938.

The decrease reached record proportions in November, when the cost shrank to $1,771,574, lowest for any month since the start of 1939. In February costs reached a peak of $2,511,824, caused by a shutdown in WPA projects.

Sherwood credited increased industrial activity, stimulated by the national defense program, for taking thousands off Ohio's relief rolls.

THREE MONTHS TO GO

IF some pretty good guessers are right about the course of world events during the next three months, this short span of time may be as important as any similar period in modern history. The fate of Britain and of Europe may be decided by April, although the fighting is expected to last much longer. And whatever the decision, it may decide the fate of many other nations for better or worse, for generations to come.

The biggest question to be determined is the ability and right of self-governing nations to survive, independently of the great powers. And involved in the same question is the survival of the free way of life known as democracy, in the old world and the new.

In this freest of all countries, every day's developments this winter will be watched with interest and concern never equalled even in the World War. We are not involved in the present war as we were in that one, but the issues are now more clearly drawn and fundamental dangers are greater in case of victory by the aggressors.

SAME OLD SMOKE FRONT

PEOPLE of industrial cities who have been suffering lately from a supermixture of fog and smoke are disheartened to learn that the movement to purify the air about them began at least half a century ago. Are the first 100 years the worst?

There was a Society for the Promotion of Atmospheric Purity in one industrial city whose Council passed a smoke ordinance in February, 1892. Many citizens then thought it a great mistake. They imagined that smoke was inseparable from industrial activity and said, "Better be rich and dirty than clean and poor."

Since then it has been discovered that much of the smoke that blackens the atmosphere represents wasteful use of fuel. With proper combustion, and better fuel in general use, a city might be both rich and clean. Furthermore, it has been found that some noxious fumes given off by chemical plants, jannanning works and various industrial processes can be recovered and turned into valuable byproducts—combining air purity with prosperity.

Yet the smoke remains, and trains and boats and apartment houses and private dwellings and even factories where it has been proved that smoke means financial loss still pour it out. The industrial revival connected with defense work has added to the winter blackness of city skies. It may also call attention again to the smoke problem and push it nearer to lasting solution.

If Hitler were successful in his plans there wouldn't be any more "have-not" nations, because he would have them all.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . . Hour by Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up early, thus plenty of time for the morning prints. Much war news and little else. Many persons tell me they wish the war would end as they are tired of reading about it. Well, millions in Europe also wish it would end, but not for the same reason. I would much rather read about it than view it.

Away to the post, there to glimpse Bill Radcliff who has just received a very important appointment in the legislature. On the educational section of the house finance committee. Weighs appropriations for educational institutions.

Folk are beginning to realize that the war in Europe is coming mighty close to home. Hit a man's pocketbook and he always will yell "ouch." And ours is not only due to be hit, but flattened. You can't do it—no man can, not even Einstein—but you might try to comprehend seventeen billion dollars. I wonder whether we eventually will have to take a page from the astronomer's book and compute our outlays in tax years instead of dollars?

The American Legion magazine has a good cover on the current issue. Uncle Sam with his coat off and rolling up his sleeves. Behind him stand the men of America. We may not know just where he is going or exactly why, but the rest of the world can safely bet its last bomb that all of us are going along with him.

Two little boys stopped at Main and Court Streets, eyed work in progress on steps leading to the basement of the Betz restaurant. "Wonder what they're doing?" one asked. "You should know what," said the other kid. "It's a bomb shelter, I'll betcha."

There goes Jim Yost, the hardware man, who has not been here so long, but long enough to find the ville very much to his liking. Most folk do if they are here very long. I think they should. Chatted with Fred Fitzpatrick, who is about to retire from the police force after more than a score of years of service. He's more than earned his rest and pension. So does every man who serves in police or fire departments of this or any other city.

Saw Wilmington down our Tigers and did not think that the score indicated the real merits of the teams. Circleville should have won the game by a comfortable margin. So thought Harold Grant and Harry Heffner, who had a preferred seat for me alongside when I arrived at half time.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN

TO PUSH EIRE

WASHINGTON—Confidential conversations have been taking place between the British and the State Department for some time aimed at getting Irish naval bases for the British.

In these conversations the British have wanted to place the United States in the unique role of either persuading or bulldozing Eire into handing over the bases. Just how the United States handled it, the British didn't much care.

But in talking to the State Department, the British pointed out that if they took Irish bases by force, there would be a burst of anti-British feeling from Irish all over the United States, particularly New England. This, the British felt, would be extremely bad just at a time when Britain particularly needs American support.

The British also pointed out to the State Department that they were placed in the unfortunate position of having to bring food to Ireland at the risk of having the ships sunk, and with no protective cooperation from the Irish whatsoever.

Therefore, the British Foreign Office urged the State Department to use its immediate and vigorous good offices with the Irish Government.

The State Department, however, has been eyeing the situation with no great enthusiasm. Informal soundings revealed that the Irish Minister in Washington, Robert Brennan, is vigorously opposed to British naval bases, and so is the Irish Government—at least until the recent bombing of Eire by German planes.

This has changed Irish public opinion considerably, and it is now possible that U. S. persuasion might get somewhere.

JUST ANOTHER SNAKE

Evie Robert (Mrs. Chip Robert), No. 1 Glamour Girl of the New Deal, has been telling this one on herself during the holidays.

One of her Christmas presents was a book entitled "Reptiles of the World," by Raymond L. Ditmars, curator of the New York Zoo. In the book was a card marked "From Just Another Snake." But there was no other means of identification.

"Oh, isn't that nice of Dr. Ditmars," Evie told her husband, "to send me a copy of his book?"

"Do you know Dr. Ditmars?" asked Mr. Robert, who used to be secretary of the Democratic National Committee.

"Of course I know him. And he remembers how much I like animals," replied Mrs. Robert, though she had to admit to herself that she had only met him once.

So all during the holidays Evie showed the snake book to friends and told them how thoughtful it was of Dr. Ditmars to send it to her. Once or twice, she thought she noticed a twinkle in Chip's eye when he said: "Evie, why don't you sit down and write Dr. Ditmars a nice letter and thank him for that book?"

Two weeks later, looking through her bills, Evie discovered one from the MacMillan Company for $1.98 for the book "Reptiles of the World." It had been ordered by her husband—"Just Another Snake."

MURDER MAKES A HERO

BY ELLIOTT FILLION
WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR
BETWEEN BITES, each one of us examined the paper which Cary wished us to see. When it came to me, I looked at it long and curiously.

It wasn't at all what I had expected. On a half sheet of cheap notepaper were pasted words cut from what I thought must be newspaper print. The word Althea, probably because it was unusual and not to be found easily in a newspaper, was carefully formed of letters cut out and pasted together, the first one being the letter "r."

The longer I examined the paper the more positive I became that Miss Althea—although she might have planned the letter—could not have done the work herself.

The words were pasted into two lines, each row as evenly spaced as though done by a micrometer. There wasn't one uneven or crookedly cut word or letter. Each word was clipped into a perfect rectangle, each letter into a precise square and pasted with unerring accuracy.

Miss Althea's claw-like hands were distorted with rheumatism, from which I had been told she was a great sufferer. Her fingers were very stiff and each knuckle was swollen and enlarged. I had seen her hands shake when handling anything, and she almost invariably lifted her teacup with both hands. Never could those crippled, trembling hands have done that meticulous cutting, spacing and pasting.

One thing puzzled me greatly. Why did the maker of the letter tack an "r" onto Miss Althea's name? Could it be possible that he—I was accepting Miss Althea's pronoun—did not know how to spell her name? In that case he could not be a close friend or acquaintance, certainly not one of the Rands. Could I have been mistaken all along? Could some unknown be taking a hand in the game?

I passed the letter on to Kaye and waited for remarks. None came. Carefully each one examined the paper and quietly passed it on. Now, when it again was in Cary's hands, I might expect to hear their varying ideas.

But I was mistaken. Not one comment was made, whatever might be their thoughts, they were being kept to themselves. Every eye was fixed on Cary.

"As far as this thing is concerned," he began, arrogantly crumpling the paper in his hand, "the only place for it is the wastebasket."

Quickly Mark put out a restraining hand.

"I wouldn't do that, Cary, if I were you."

Surprise flooded Cary's face.

"You wouldn't throw it away?"

"I would not. I'd keep it for future reference. You may want it some day."

Cary's forehead wrinkled into a frown; his lips pursed together.

"Perhaps you are right," he said, after a brief consideration, "but an anonymous letter is always rank poison. My only thought was to get rid of it."

"I'd keep it," Mark spoke impressively.

"I think it's merely another attempt on Aunt Althea's part to get dad's papers. She's tried everything else, and it would have been easy for her to slip this paper part way under the door this morning. This thing didn't come through the mail, you know."

"She didn't hit Jabez over the head," Mark's words were like an icy gale sweeping over me. "And can you imagine her spelling or allowing anyone else to spell her name with an 'r'?"

"You mean you think—"

Impatiently, Mark interrupted him.

"I don't know what I do think—except that that paper is worth keeping."

Slowly Cary smoothed out the crumpled ball, folded it, drew out his wallet and placed it within.

"You win, Mark. I'll keep it. I'll be glad when I can go over those papers. That'll end all this foolishness. I should have done it before, but Granddad asked me to wait until we could go over them together. We're starting on them in the morning."

"That's fine," Mark said heartily. "When you've done that you'll know what, if anything, Aunt Althea's raising all this rumpus for."

With that we left the breakfast table. If there was anything more said on the subject, I didn't hear it. The rest of the day was quiet, uneventful. Next morning Cary came into the alcove where I was typing.

"We're starting on the papers from great-grandfather's chest this morning," he said. "Will you bring your notebooks and pencils?"

To Captain Essex's room, we went. He seemed much brighter. Probably the prospect of going over the old papers acted as a stimulant to his enfeebled frame. Cary drew a light table to the side of the captain's chair, installed me at one end and took his seat across from the captain. He laid the bundle of books and papers he carried on the table, removed the rubber bands which encircled them, divided them into two piles and pushed one stack toward his grandfather, retaining the other himself.

"There you are, Granddad," he said. "Now we'll really get somewhere."

All morning we worked steadily. Occasionally the silence was broken by Cary asking his grandfather a question or a comment was proffered by the old captain.

Papers which we were to use were given to me to copy, and it was seldom that such a paper failed to elicit from the captain a story which had been told him by his father. Often Cary would give me a nod, and I would take down in shorthand the story the old man was telling. By noon I had filled two notebooks and part of a third and still had a pile of papers to copy.

"Perhaps you are right," he said, after a brief consideration, "but an

ernoon, but Cary firmly refused to do so.

"You'll get too tired, Granddad," he objected. "Nancy has enough typing to do to keep her busy all the afternoon, and I don't want to get too far ahead of her. We've almost finished with great-grandfather's chest; we'll be able to start on yours tomorrow."

In the library alcove, Cary sat beside me until I finished copying the last of the papers, which he then replaced in the safe. I typed all the afternoon, expecting that the next day would give me as much more work. But the old captain showed the effect of the hours spent bending over the papers on the previous day, and Cary refused to do more than finish with the contents of the first chest.

"I want you rested and fit as a fiddle, Granddad," he said. "I'd like you to tell me in detail about every one of your papers."

The stories which the captain had told us of his father included running the blockade in the War of 1812, fights with Caribbean pirates and hostile South Sea Islanders, voyages made in the China sea trade and races around the Horn to San Francisco and Australia during the gold rushes. My notebook was the most enthralling thing I had ever transcribed, and I worked until midnight getting caught up on the work.

The next day we started on the papers from the captain's chest. I had wondered what he could tell of interest after the thrilling things to which I had listened, but I soon found that, if different, his life had been quite as exciting as his father's.

His own experiences included fights with Malay and Chinese pirates; running the gauntlet of Confederate cruisers during our own Civil War; trips to South Africa with cargoes of farming tools for the Boers and lumber from Puget sound to Australia; fascinating descriptions of foreign ports with their people and customs commonplace to them, so odd to us, and memorable hours of hurricanes and days of the doldrums to point a vivid contrast.

I felt as though I were living in a dream. That book of Cary's would be thrilling enough for a best seller even if the characters in it were those of real life instead of fiction.

When the captain's papers were finished we started on those of Captain Cary Essex III. I was nervous and uneasy, wondering just what might be found there, but hours passed uneventfully. The life of the last Captain Essex had not been so exciting as that of his father or grandfather. His logs and papers were mostly hum-drum records of hard times, increasing wages, ballasted voyages from port to port in search of a cargo and bitter accounts of the steamers which made his Gay Lady a back number.

Suddenly, I saw Cary start violently, cast an anxious glance at his father, and deliberately slip a paper out of the pile before him into his pocket.

STARS SAY—

For Thursday, January 9

EXCELLENT prospects are found among the astral auguries for this day, which may bring definite progress in giving an expansive and stabilizing spur to plans and objectives of major scope. These may be in cooperation with very large corporations, or with political, diplomatic or fraternal bodies in which sagacity, subtlety and finesse may be successful rather than indulging in strenuous, aggressive and reckless methods, or in other forms of excess, agitation or lack of control. Be calm and subtle in all circumstances.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may have a very important year with definite progress made in connection with large corporations or diplomatic, political or secret organizations where tact, shrewdness, strategy take precedence over open, aggressive, forceful, quarrelsome or violent methods. With control, reserve and calm judgments there are signs of unusual prospects for expanding the interests and putting the fortunes on secure and enduring bases. Conservative and cautious measures win out over impetuosity and high pressure. Be wise with writings and signatures.

A child born on this day should have much ingenuity, creative ability and keen insight, with sound judgment, although it may be impetuous, aggressive and overzealous, perhaps quarrelsome and rash.

THREE MONTHS TO GO

IF some pretty good guessers are right about the course of world events during the next three months, this short span of time may be as important as any similar period in modern history. The fate of Britain and of Europe may be decided by April, although the fighting is expected to last much longer. And whatever the decision, it may decide the fate of many other nations for better or worse, for generations to come.

The biggest question to be determined is the ability and right of self-governing nations to survive, independently of the great powers. And involved in the same question is the survival of the free way of life known as democracy, in the old world and the new.

In this freest of all countries, every day's developments this winter will be watched with interest and concern never equalled even in the World War. We are not involved in the present war as we were in that one, but the issues are now more clearly drawn and fundamental dangers are greater in case of victory by the aggressors.

SAME OLD SMOKE FRONT

PEOPLE of industrial cities who have been suffering lately from a supermixture of fog and smoke are disheartened to learn that the movement to purify the air about them began at least half a century ago. Are the first 100 years the worst?

There was a Society for the Promotion of Atmospheric Purity in one industrial city whose Council passed a smoke ordinance in February, 1892. Many citizens then thought it a great mistake. They imagined that smoke was inseparable from industrial activity and said, "Better be rich and dirty than clean and poor."

Since then it has been discovered that much of the smoke that blackens the atmosphere represents wasteful use of fuel. With proper combustion, and better fuel in general use, a city might be both rich and clean. Furthermore, it has been found that some noxious fumes given off by chemical plants, jappanning works and various industrial processes can be recovered and turned into valuable by-products—combining air purity with prosperity.

Yet the smoke remains, and trains and boats and apartment houses and private dwellings and even factories where it has been proved that smoke means financial loss still pour it out. The industrial revival connected with defense work has added to the winter blackness of city skies. It may also call attention again to the smoke problem and push it nearer to lasting solution.

If Hitler were successful in his plans there wouldn't be any more "have-not" nations, because he would have them all.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN

TO PUSH EIRE

WASHINGTON—Confidential conversations have been taking place between the British and the State Department for some time aimed at getting Irish naval bases for the British.

In these conversations the British have wanted to place the United States in the unique role of either persuading or bulldozing Eire into handing over the bases. Just how the United States handled it, the British didn't much care.

But in talking to the State Department, the British pointed out that if they took Irish bases by force, there would be a burst of anti-British feeling from Irish all over the United States, particularly New England. This, the British felt, would be extremely bad just at a time when Britain particularly needs American support.

The British also pointed out to the State Department that they were placed in the unfortunate position of having to bring food to Ireland at the risk of having the ships sunk, and with no protective co-operation from the Irish whatsoever.

Therefore, the British Foreign Office urged the State Department to use its immediate and vigorous good offices with the Irish Government.

The State Department, however, has been eyeing the situation with no great enthusiasm. Informal soundings revealed that the Irish Minister in Washington, Robert Brennan, is vigorously opposed to British naval bases, and so is the Irish Government—at least until the recent bombing of Eire by German planes.

This has changed Irish public opinion considerably, and it is now possible that U. S. persuasion might get somewhere.

Evie Robert (Mrs. Chip Robert), No. 1 Glamour Girl of the New Deal, has been telling this one on herself during the holidays.

One of her Christmas presents was a book entitled "Reptiles of the World," by Raymond L. Ditmars, curator of the New York Zoo. In the book was a card marked "From Just Another Snake." But there was no other means of identification.

"Oh, isn't that nice of Dr. Ditmars," Evie told her husband, "to send me a copy of his book?"

But, somebody says, all the proper conveniences are at the hospital. Well, you can rent them at home from a sick room supply company.

From these, you can rent hospital beds and mattresses, over-bed tables, nightgowns that button up the back, bed pans, cradle beds, and fracture cases. Even Bradford frames and pulley beds for difficult fracture cases! Wheel chairs, of all kinds, wheel stretchers, invalid walkers (used to teach convalescents to walk), back rests, infra-red lamps, mercury quartz ultra-violet lamps, short-wave diathermy sets, inhalators, baby scales, rubber air rings, crutches, canes, china glassware, knives and forks and, in fact, anything. A very sensible idea. You're not going to be sick all your life, you know. Your baby needs to be weighed only while it's a baby. Why not rent what you need?

I had seen her hands shake when handling anything, and she almost invariably lifted her teacup with both hands. Never could those crippled, trembling hands have done that meticulous cutting, spacing and pasting.

One thing puzzled me greatly. Why did the maker of the letter tack an "r" onto Miss Althea's name? Could it be possible that he—I was accepting Miss Althea's pronoun—did not know how to spell her name? In that case he could not be a close friend or acquaintance, certainly not one of the Rands. Could I have been mistaken all along? Could some unknown be taking a hand in the game?

I passed the letter on to Kaye and waited for remarks. None came. Carefully each one examined the paper and quietly passed it on. Now, when it again was in Cary's hands, I might expect to hear their varying ideas.

But I was mistaken. Not one comment was made, whatever might be their thoughts, they were being kept to themselves. Every eye was fixed on Cary.

"As far as this thing is concerned," he began, arrogantly crumpling the paper in his hand, "the only place for it is the wastebasket."

Quickly Mark put out a restraining hand.

"I wouldn't do that, Cary, if I were you."

Surprise flooded Cary's face. "You wouldn't throw it away?"

"I would not. I'd keep it for future reference. You may want it some day."

Cary's forehead wrinkled into a frown; his lips pursed together.

"Perhaps you are right," he said, after a brief consideration, "but an anonymous letter is always rank poison. My only thought was to get rid of it."

"I'd keep it," Mark spoke impressively.

"I think it's merely another attempt on Aunt Althea's part to get dad's papers. She's tried everything else, and it would have been easy for her to slip this paper part way under the door this morning. This thing didn't come through the mail, you know."

"She didn't hit Jabez over the head?" Mark's words were like an icy gale sweeping over me. "And can you imagine her spelling or allowing anyone else to spell her name with an 'r'?"

"You mean you think—"

Impatiently, Mark interrupted him.

"I don't know what I do think—except that that paper is worth keeping."

Slowly Cary smoothed out the crumpled ball, folded it, drew out his wallet and placed it within.

"You win, Mark. I'll keep it. I'll be glad when I can go over those papers. That'll end all this foolishness. I should have done it before, but Granddad asked me to wait until we could go over them together. We're starting on them in the morning."

"That's fine," Mark said heartily. "When you've done that you'll know what, if anything, Aunt Althea's raising all this rumpus for."

With that we left the breakfast table. If there was anything more said on the subject, I didn't hear it. The rest of the day was quiet, uneventful. Next morning Cary came into the alcove where I was typing.

"We're starting on the papers from great-grandfather's chest this morning," he said. "Will you bring your notebooks and pencils?"

To Captain Essex's room, we went. He seemed much brighter. Probably the prospect of going over the old papers acted as a stimulant to his enfeebled frame.

Cary drew a light table to the side of the captain's chair, and staked me at one end and took his seat across from the captain. He laid the bundle of books and papers he carried on the table, removed the rubber bands which encircled them, divided them into two piles and pushed one stack toward his grandfather, retaining the other himself.

"There you are, Granddad," he said. "Now we'll really get somewhere."

All morning we worked steadily. Occasionally the silence was broken by Cary asking his grandfather a question or a comment was proffered by the old captain.

Papers which we were to use were given to me to copy, and it was seldom that such a paper failed to elicit from the captain a story which had been told him by his father. Often Cary would give me a nod, and I would take down in shorthand the story the old man was telling. By noon I had filled two notebooks and part of a third and still had a pile of papers to copy.

Captain Essex would have continued the work through the afternoon, but Cary firmly refused to do so.

"You'll get too tired, Granddad," he objected. "Nancy has enough typing to do to keep her busy all the afternoon, and I don't want to get too far ahead of her. We've almost finished with great-grandfather's chest; we'll be able to start on yours tomorrow."

In the library alcove, Cary sat beside me until I finished copying the last of the papers, which he then replaced in the safe. I typed all the afternoon, expecting that the next day would give me as much more work. But the old captain showed the effect of the hours spent bending over the papers on the previous day, and Cary refused to do more than finish with the contents of the first chest.

"I want you rested and fresh as a fiddle, Granddad," he said. "I'd like you to tell me in detail about every one of your papers."

The stories which the captain had told us of his father included running the blockade in the War of 1812, fights with Caribbean pirates and hostile South Sea islanders, voyages made in the China sea trade and races around the Horn to San Francisco and Australia during the gold rushes. My notebook was the most enthralling thing I had ever transcribed, and I worked until midnight getting caught up on the work.

The next day we started on the papers from the captain's chest. I had wondered what he could tell of interest after the thrilling things to which I had listened, but I soon found that, if different, his life had been quite as exciting as his father's.

His own experiences included fights with Malay and Chinese pirates; running the gauntlet of Confederate cruisers during our own Civil war; trips to South Africa with cargoes of farming tools for the Boers and lumber from Puget sound to Australia; fascinating descriptions of foreign ports with their people and customs commensurate to them, so odd to us, and memorable hours of hurricanes and days in the doldrums to point a vivid contrast.

I felt as though I were living in a dream. That book of Cary's would be thrilling enough for a best seller even if the characters in it were those of real life instead of fiction.

When the captain's papers were finished we started on those of Captain Cary Essex III. I was nervous and uneasy, wondering just what might be found there, but hours passed uneventfully. The life of the last Captain Essex had not been so exciting as that of his father or grandfather. His logs and papers were mostly hum-drum records of hard times, increasing wages, ballasted voyages from port to port in search of a cargo and bitter accounts of the steamers which made his Gay Lady a back number.

Suddenly, I saw Cary start violently, cast an anxious glance at his father, and deliberately slip a paper out of the pile before him into his pocket.

STARS SAY—

For Thursday, January 9

EXCELLENT prospects are found among the astral auguries for this day, which may bring definite progress in giving an expansive and stabilizing spur to plans and objectives of major scope. These may be in cooperation with very large corporations, or with political, diplomatic or fraternal bodies in which sagacity, subtlety and finesse may be successful rather than indulging in strenuous, aggressive and reckless methods, or in other forms of excess, agitation or lack of control. Be calm and subtle in all circumstances.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may have a very important year with definite progress made in connection with large corporations or diplomatic, political or secret organizations where tact, shrewdness, strategy take precedence over open, aggressive, forceful, quarrelsome or violent methods. With control, reserve and calm judgments there are signs of unusual prospects for expanding the interests and putting the fortunes on secure and enduring bases. Conservative and cautious measures win out over impetuosity and high pressure. Be wise with writings and signatures.

A child born on this day should have much ingenuity, creative ability and keen insight, with sound judgment, although it may be impetuous, aggressive and overzealous, perhaps quarrelsome and rash.

Bobb Quintet To Invade Athletic Club Tonight

Circleville and Pickaway County basketball fans who like plenty of excitement will be treated to much entertainment Thursday and Friday evenings when a heavy card of the cage sport is on tap. Games in Circleville and throughout the county will provide some thrilling play.

Thursday brings the weekly Circleville Athletic Club-Stone's Grill feature, this week the strong Bobb Chevrolets of Columbus moving in to the C.A.C. gym for an encounter. On the Bobb outfit are such stars as Red Rehmet, Glen Golden, Red Foster, Mervin Cooper, George Myers and Dick Traphagen, some of the finest athletes in Columbus. The first three mention are all well over the six foot mark, and this trio does most of the scoring for the Bobbs. Rehmet is a former Central High star and Golden and Foster did their caging at South.

The Athletic Club-Stone crew will be ready for anything the invaders have to offer, Manager Johnny Heskell planning to start Purcell, Millar, Gregg, Melson and Roush.

Service Clubs Play
The preliminary will be between the Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs at 7:30, some interesting "basketball" to be played at that time. Both teams have been practicing diligently and both promise to be in condition for the contest.

Friday night finds the county league in action with five games booked, Walnut going to Scioto, Darby to New Holland, Perry to Pickaway, Salt Creek to Washington and Monroe to Ashville, the latter game expected to be one of the highlights. Ashville is undefeated in the league and rests comfortably on top the heap, all others having lost at least one.

Circleville takes on Pete Treago's Grove City varsity in the Athletic Club gymnasium. The Greyhounds have been improving after a close start and expect to make a good showing against Roy Black's quintet.

The Tigers were somewhat disappointing in their defeat by Wilmington and will be out to redeem themselves.

CARDS PIN HOPE ON HURLERS OF FARM OUTFITS

NEW YORK, Jan. 9—The greatest congregation of rookies to assemble at the portals of the National League in a decade await the forthcoming baseball season, and if the pitchers among them are going to swing the balance in the pennant race, then watch the St. Louis Cardinals. Their outstanding weakness of recent campaigns may be cured, a check at league headquarters of their probable roster revealed today.

Freshly hand-plucked off the various Cardinal farms are nearly a dozen flingers of apparent class who will augment a staff composed largely of Fiddler Bill McGee, Lon Warneke, Clyde Shoun and Mort Cooper, a quartet which won 56 games last year.

The best of the newcomers among the Cardinal pitchers, on paper, seem to be these:

Ernie White, who won 13 and lost 4 with an earned run average of 2.25; Harry Brecheen, 16 and 9, and Murry Dickson, 17 and 8, all from Columbus of the American Association; Sam Nahem, 8 and 6, with an earned run average of 1.65, after moving from Louisville, and Howard Krist, 22 and 9 with an earned run mark of 1.71, both of Houston, in the Texas League; Hank Gornicki, 19 and 10, and Herschel Lyons, 19 and 12, both of Rochester, of the International League, and Max Surkont, who won 19 against 5 defeats, with 2.50 in earned runs, at Decatur of the three-I league.

ST. JOHN GIVES TRIO OF NAMES TO BUCK BOARD

Brown, Hauser And Faurot Being Considered, Say Ohio Spokesmen

COLUMBUS, Jan. 9—The favorite guessing game of Ohio sports fans—who will be Ohio State's next head football coach—continued unabated today as no vote was taken on the successor to deposed Francis Schmidt at last night's session of the university athletic board.

The board heard Athletic Director L. W. St. John relate the details of his search for a new grid mentor; of his interviews with Paul "Bucky" Brown, of Massillon; with Dr. George Hauser, line coach at Minnesota, and with Don Faurot, coach at Missouri.

Those three ranks as favorites and in about that order, but the possibility that a dark horse candidate may slip under the wire first was by no means to be taken lightly.

St. John faced the board only a few hours after he conferred with Hauser. No report of the conclave was made public, but shortly before they met the genial doctor remarked:

"I'm just here to see what it's all about. I've got the best line coaching job in the country, and I'm happy at Minnesota."

Board members are expected to ponder over St. John's pronouncements between now and next Tuesday noon, when they meet again, possibly to take some action. Some quarters held, however, that that meeting will be devoted solely to a barrage of questions fired at Brown, who, it was said, is to be summoned to Columbus from Massillon for the occasion.

COURT CONTEST BETWEEN SCOTS, CARROLL CRUCIAL

By International News Service

The state's basketball spotlight swings toward Cleveland tonight, whither Wooster's Scots journey to place a 35-game Ohio Conference winning streak on the block as they tangle with John Carroll.

The Scots got into their winning habit in the last four games of the 1937-38 season, and proudly hung up undefeated Conference records the next two seasons. To date this year they have played three games, whipping Miami U. and Belmont and dropping a 40-33 tilt to Duquesne at Pittsburgh. John Carroll has won its two starts, including its 51-23 annihilation of Penn. last night, thus presaging a hum-dinger of a game.

Speculation over the outcome of this classic actually outweighed consideration of last night's results, although the latter included an Ohio Conference win by Bowling Green over Baldwin-Wallace, 41-33. It was the B-G's third win in seven starts, and

INFLUENZA CLOSES LAURELVILLE SCHOOL

74 GRADE, HIGH PUPILS SUFFER FROM AILMENT

Forty Percent Of Boys, Girls At Saltcreek Out Of Classes

OTHER TOWNSHIPS VARY

Circleville Lists Large Number Of Cases In All Buildings

BULLETIN
The Saltcreek board of education closed the school Thursday, as influenza cases in the school mounted to an estimated 50 percent of the total enrollment. The board's action was taken on the recommendation of Health Commissioner A. D. Blackburn.

Continued spread of influenza in the Pickaway County vicinity closed the Laurelville school Thursday and threatened to cause others to shut down because of absences.

Circleville schools reported absences high in both the grades and the high school. High School Principal J. Wray Henry said there were 56 absences in the high school Wednesday, and although not all were influenza cases, the percentage was high. Two high school teachers also are reported to have the ailment.

Nine teachers of the Circleville system were unable to teach their classes Thursday, Superintendent Frank Fischer said.

Laurelville schools closed after the epidemic spread to 74 pupils in the grade and high school. The school will remain closed the rest of the week, but will reopen Monday unless the epidemic spreads.

Saltcreek Township school remained open Thursday, despite reports that cases in the school were running as high as 40 percent. Authorities at Walnut Township school estimated their attendance had been reduced by 15 percent, with Ashville also reporting a number of cases. Nineteen of the 31 students in the seventh grade at Ashville were absent Wednesday.

Others Scattered

Scioto Township school reported a few cases, although the disease has by no means reached epidemic proportions, authorities said. Attendance at Pickaway Township also has been effected, with 33 reported absent Monday and 25 Wednesday. Mumps in the school account for some of the absences, it was pointed out.

John Florence, superintendent at Washington Township school, said attendance at the Washington school was good, although three youngsters were absent because of mumps. The flu epidemic struck the school earlier in the season, he said, and now attendance had returned almost to normal.

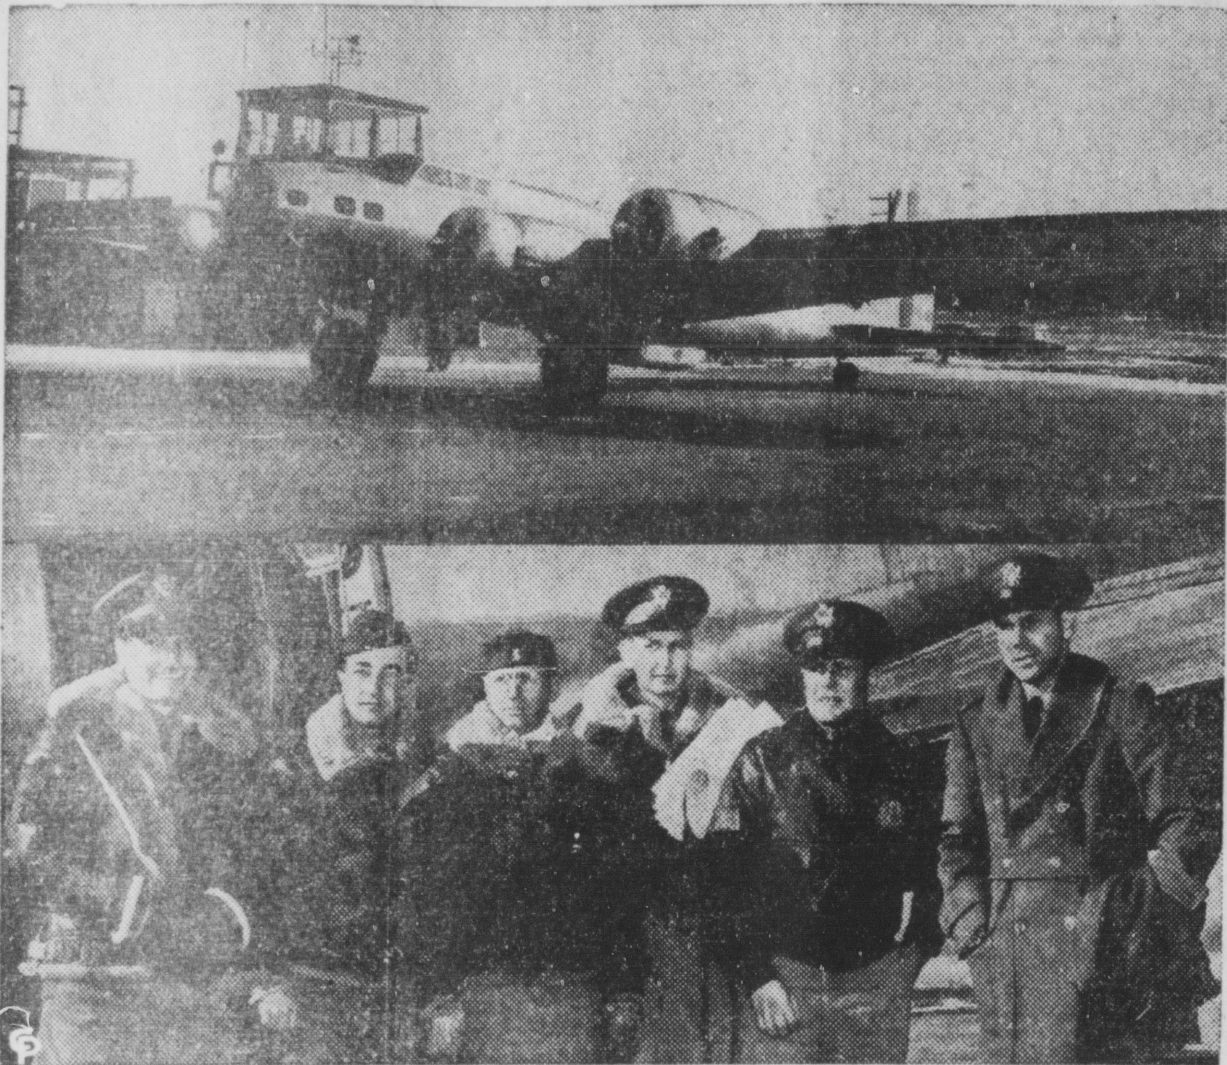

Pielgord Hansen, superintendent at Jackson Township, reported attendance normal Thursday, and said the school had not been affected materially by the disease.

Additional schools in the Portsmouth region closed Thursday as the epidemic continued to spread. All Green Township schools were dismissed, including Green High School near Franklin Furnace.

Bloom Township schools at Scioto Furnace and at South Webster, including the high school at the Kyra Consolidated School in Vernon Township also were closed Thursday.

School officials estimated that more than one third of the pupils in Scioto rural schools are out

Here Are Plane and Crew of Long Army Flight

PICTURED above is the United States army bomber and its crew which made a 3,050-mile non-stop non-refueling flight out of Dayton, O., at an average speed of 190 miles an hour. Originally planned as a long-range high altitude flight at 15,000 feet and above, the bomber was forced to fly at half that altitude for most of the trip due to cross-winds of high velocity.

Ford to Start Work On Plane Part Production

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Jan. 9—Edsel Ford, 47-year-old president of Ford Motor Company, after inspecting the huge plant of Consolidated Aircraft which manufactures bombing patrol planes for the Army and Navy, said today his company "will manufacture plane parts" for assembly at Consolidated's new plant to be located at Fort Worth, Texas.

Ford expected to remain in San Diego today and possibly tomorrow to complete the deal with Consolidated and to further inspect the big plant.

He expressed amazement at the complex character of the processing which goes into the huge long range B-24 bombers, and declared that an entirely different type of plant would have to augment the present facilities at the Ford River Rouge plant to enable fabrication.

Ford declared his plant also would manufacture parts for Douglas Aircraft Company, engaged in building planes for the War Department.

He pointed out that although the Ford plant could use many of its tools already on hand for the machining of small parts, it would be necessary to install special dies, jigs and forms adapted to aircraft production.

"The tooling period would be a matter of months," he said. "Our company is readying itself as fast as possible for the job, and the flow of parts to assembly plants could possibly start within a year."

Accompanied on the tour of the plant by his sons Benson and Henry Ford II, company engineers and Major R. C. Fleet, president of Consolidated, Ford showed intense interest in the B-24 bombers, which the War Department and the National Defense Commission selected as one of the craft in its mass production program.

Circleville Lists Large Number Of Cases In All Buildings

BULLETIN
The Saltcreek board of education closed the school Thursday, as influenza cases in the school mounted to an estimated 50 percent of the total enrollment. The board's action was taken on the recommendation of Health Commissioner A. D. Blackburn.

Continued spread of influenza in the Pickaway County vicinity closed the Laurelville school Thursday and threatened to cause others to shut down because of absences.

Circleville schools reported absences high in both the grades and the high school. High School Principal J. Two high school teachers also are reported to have the ailment.

Nine teachers of the Circleville system were unable to teach their classes Thursday, Superintendent Frank Fischer said.

Laurelville schools closed after the epidemic spread to 74 pupils in the grade and high school. The school will remain closed the rest of the week, but will reopen Monday unless the epidemic spreads.

Saltcreek Township school remained open Thursday, despite reports that cases in the school were running as high as 40 percent. Authorities at Walnut Township school estimated their attendance had been reduced by 15 percent, with Ashville also reporting a number of cases. Nineteen of the 31 students in the seventh grade at Ashville were absent Wednesday.

Scioto Township school reported a few cases, although the disease has by no means reached epidemic proportions, authorities said.
